

World Book Day 2026

World Book Day

Sarah Spike, the fortune teller was a young woman who loved travelling the world with her travelling fair. One trip took her to a holiday island. She was sorting out the pockets in her travelling coat. She slotted a photo into her jacket which she had received from her grandma. Her grandma had put a feather in the back of the photo, in case Sarah ever needed to reply to the letter. Soon after she had sent the letter, Sarah's grandma died, leaving Sarah upset and lost. Sarah had lost her parents at a young age and now her grandma was not there for her any more, or to see Sarah tell her fortunes at the fair. She missed them all. Sarah could never reply to her grandma's letter now, but she kept it for good luck. She also kept it for its magic. The feather was also a call for help when needed.
